

Stoup Brewing Opens New Upstairs Space at The Taproom

July 24, 2017
Washington Beer Blog
By: Kendall Jones

Stoup Brewing in Ballard recently opened a new space at the taproom. Upstairs at Stoup is an extension to the existing taproom that can be rented out for private parties and events. It sits above the taproom, faces west and has a deck over the beer garden.

When not reserved for private events, the new space is open to the public Thursday thru Sunday. No dogs and no kids, though.

The event space can accommodate 40 seated guests, 60–70 standing. For events, guests can select four beers from the current taproom beer menu. There's a service bar with four taps. Outside catering is welcome.

“We are thrilled to accommodate event requests.” says Lara Zahaba, one of Stoup’s Co-Owners noted, “While we have always welcomed groups to carve out their own space among our regulars, it is really great to be able to offer a more intimate setting as well. We really couldn’t be happier with the beautiful design work of Sean Sifagaloa at KRFTWRK.”

Private events can be booked in four-hour increments on week-nights and throughout the weekend. Additionally, two-hour blocks are available from 9:00 am – 4:00 pm weekdays for businesses looking to host off-site meetings.

Specific hours and pricing can be found at www.stoupbrewing.com/upstairs-at-stoup. Inquiries can also be sent to events@stoupbrewing.com.

